Let it pass.

Be not swift to take offence;

Let it pass!

Anger is a fire to sense;

Let it pass!

Bread not darkly o'er a wrong;

Which will disappear long;

Rather sing this cheery song—

Let it pass!

Let it pass!

Silence corrodes the poor mind;

Let it pass!

As the unregarded wind,

Let it pass!

Any vulgar soul that lives

May condemn without reprieve;

'Tis the noble who forgive;

Let it pass!

Let it pass!

Echo not an angry word;

Let it pass!

Think how often you have tried;

Let it pass!

Since our joys must pass away,

Like the dewdrop on the spray,

Wherefore should our sorrows stay?

Let them pass!

Let them pass!

If for good you've taken ill,

Let it pass!

Ob't be kind and gentle still;

Let it pass!

Time at last makes all things straight;

Let us not resent, but walk,

And our triumph shall be great;

Let it pass!

Let it pass!

—All the Year Round.

VARIETY.

BLESH.—A blush is to beauty what the morning dawn is to nature; its charms receives from it a new splendor.

ALNE.—The commencement and the decline of love both betray themselves by the embarrassments we feel in hiding ourselves alone.

BARTON.—We learn from M. de Henney, saying "Sir, I present to you an individual who will give you immortality; but you must, meanwhile, give him something to live upon!"

A PERFECT WOMAN.

The courage to endure and to obey—
A hate of gossip parlor and of sway,
Crowned Isabel, through all her plaid life,
The queen of marriage—a most perfect wife.

—Tranquillity.

THE BONAPARTE CHARACTER.—Harriet Martineau thus wrote many years since, in reference to the Bonapartes:

"The Bonapartes are not men of character, of political or moral, of patriotic temper, of philosophical exegesis. They are low in aim, vulgar in quality of intellect, and consequently in manners, and by no prepossessions inclined to rescue Italy for the benefit of the Italians. They are regarded as selfish adventurers rather than as emancipators of nations."

A RETROSPECTIVE VIEW OF FUTURITY.—Were member a sentimental old bachelor of a by-gone age, who was particularly addicted to moralizing over his cups, and puffing forth a large volume of smoke, he would signingly say, "Ah, sir, we could but take a resolute step in view of futurity!" That is to say, we need to laugh at him. But, after all, the retrospective is the only rational view we can take of the future. We can only guess what may be, by recollecting what has been. Nobody thinks of that, but everybody thinks that everything is to it never has been. And hereupon is kept up the breed of that cross-looking animal called the disappointed man who by virtue of misapprehension, has taken out a license to frown at everybody he meets, and to gnash his teeth at every newspaper.

PROVERBS FOR ALL READERS.—We learn that some are fairies. They must be in harvest when they will not grow in spring. Better go round than fall into the ditch. Little sticks help better than larger ones to kindle the fire. The slygards is brother to the beggar. Revenge is the only debt which it is wrong to pay. Man doubles his evils by hounding upon them. Deeds are fruits, words are leaves. Those who sow iniquity reap misery. Never go halfway to meet misfortune. One vice is more expensive than many virtues.

BONKES HAVE BEEN KNOWN TO LIGHT PIPES, to wrap up snuff, and to smoke with British and French烟, have not unfortunately, in time of war, made such a noise that they cannot between bread and butter. Carelessness gives the bank enormous profits, agains which the loss of a mere £30,000 note is but a trifle. In the forty years, between 1792 and 1832, there were outstanding notes of the Bank of England—presumed to have been lost or destroyed—amounting to £1,300,000 odd, every shilling which was clear profit to the bank.

"COMMAND S. M.—Never take 'come and see' for a phrase meant in earnest, unless it is accompanied with a date. All invitation 'without circumstances' is no invitation at all.

Depend upon it if any lady or gentleman desire your company he or she will appoint a time for your visit. Call on me when you can make it convenient." "drop in as you are passing."

"make us a visit whenever you have an hour or two, to spare." These immodestities by which men of the world underlie that they are expected to do the thing requested. When people wish to be cheaply polite, there is nothing like this kind of vagueness. The complimentary small change of society should always be taken at a discount. It is never worth its face, or anything like it. Yet it is a convenient medium of exchange for all that, and heavy debts of gratitude, that ought to be paid in better coin, are often paid with it. People that have more polish than principle, it is true, complain of it, however sparingly or not at all. Whoever makes a friendly visit at a fashionable house on the strength of a mere "come and see," will be likely enough to find that the family circle which has dropped into request is as uncongenial as the arctic circle, and to leave it with a chilly feeling about the heart that will prevent him venturing in the same high latitude thereafter. But when a whole-souled fellow, whom you know to be a friend, grandly and vigorously by the hand and says, "come and dine with us to-day—dinner on the table at five o'clock"—he sure to come we shall expect you"—go if you can, and you will be all the better for it, both in mind and body. One likes to meet friends at the hospitable board—one's own or their's, it matters not which—but a nod in the street is all sufficient from a fashionable acquaintance.
